Perfect physical specimens, Atlantic City's 65 bronzed lifeguards and seven beach captains form a constant reminder of America's athletes. Not mere chance has led them to the task of protecting bathers. Rather, years of rigid training preceded their acceptance as members of the beach patrol. That Atlantic City's beach is the safest for bathers is not alone because of Mother Nature's having provided a shallow, gradual gradation, but also because of the zeal with which the Beach Patrol pursues its duties.
